Introduction
My Name is Chris. I am a student at Monmouth University and I am learning to be a great storyteller. In order for me to be a great storyteller, I need you guys to be a great audience, so please be quiet and raise your hand if you have a question.

TIME: 3-5 minutes

II. Tolerance definition
Does anyone know what tolerance is? Tolerance is all part of doing the right thing. That means that you have to be responsible and to always tell the truth.

TIME: 3-5 minutes

III. Introduction of Story Questions
This story comes from the Ngyiaampaan tribe of the Aborigenes people, who were the first people to live in Australia. In their culture, the eagle represents good and the crow represent evil. In this story, we are going to learn the importance of being honest and responsible, and how the crow is not.

TIME: 3-5 minutes

IV. Tell the Story
I will tell the story. The leo will help out only when asked to.

Mid story question: The crow realized that he has done something horribly wrong by hitting the baby eagle. The eagle will probably be upset when he finds out what happened. Let’s take a few minutes so you and your neighbor can talk about what you would do when the eagle came back to tell him about what happened.

TIME: 10-15 minutes
V. Discussion questions
   1. Should the crow have told the truth?
   2. The crow only babysat to get food. Was he greedy for doing it for that reason?
   3. Why do you think that the eagle was more angry about the crow lying than hurting the baby?
   4. If you ever lied to someone, what would you do to make them feel better about what happened?

TIME: 5-10 minutes

VI. Activity
   The kids will write an apology letter to the eagle from the crow’s perspective. They must answer who the letter is being written to, what happened, when did this happen, why the crow did it and why he is sorry, how the crow will make things better with the eagle, and when he will do all of this as they apply to the story.

TIME: 25-30 minutes

VII. Conclusion
   What did you guys learn today?
   Will you ever tell anyone this story? Why?
   What was your favorite part of the story?
   What did you like about this story telling?
   Would you like to do this again?

I had a great time today, and thank you all for letting me tell you this story. I hope you all enjoyed the story and share it with other people. You guys have a great weekend.
